

National Procurement Strategy for Local Government in England 2022

Toolkit

Introduction

This toolkit has been developed to support delivery of the National Procurement Strategy for Local Government in England 2022.

The purpose of the toolkit is to help councils, and groups of councils, to set objectives in relation to the maturity levels in each of the key areas of the strategy and to assess their own progress against those objectives.

Showing leadership

Key area: Engaging councillors
Description	Engaging councillors refers to the engagement of councillors in the leadership and governance of council procurement and commercial activity. This includes both the cabinet or portfolio holders and overview and scrutiny members. To perform their roles effectively councillors benefit from good procurement and commercial advice and skills.
Help
What it is: Councillors set the council vision and strategic priorities and must be satisfied that the procurement and commercial arrangements for their delivery are robust. Councillors make key decisions, particularly in major projects, and maintain oversight of the performance of key contracts, agreeing corrective action where necessary. Councillor engagement needs to be supported through training, good procurement and commercial advice and reporting arrangements. Why it is important: When councillors are fully engaged with procurement and commercial matters, the quality of decision-making is better and oversight and accountability are improved. Councillor engagement leads to better project delivery and better outcomes for the local community.

High level principle and specific behaviour
Councillors regard procurement and commercial issues as purely operational matters.	The council is exploring the best approach to councillor engagement in procurement and commercial matters.	Councillor engagement is delivering better results on some projects.	Councillor engagement is delivering better results across all procurement and commercial activity.	Councillor engagement is contributing to the success of a combined authority or group of councils project or another innovative project.

Procurement and commercial champions
Councillors recognise the role of procurement and commercial input in delivering the council's vision and strategic priorities.	The council is exploring the best way for councillors to champion procurement and commercial matters.	Procurement and commercial matters are within the portfolio of a cabinet member (or equivalent arrangements).	The portfolio holder (or equivalent) is making a demonstrable impact on council procurement and commercial activities.	The portfolio holder (or equivalent) is making an impact on a combined authority or group of councils project or another innovative project.
Reporting
Councillors in executive and overview and scrutiny roles receive reports required for formal decision-making and reviews.	The council is exploring better ways of informing councillors about procurement and commercial activities.	Councillors receive regular briefings and reports, going beyond formal requirements, which highlight the contribution of procurement and commercial matters.	Councillors are performing their roles more effectively due to enhanced reporting arrangements.	Enhanced reporting extends to combined authority or group of councils projects and other innovative projects.
Reporting
There is no formal training for councillors on procurement and commercial issues.	Some councillors have attended relevant training courses.	Councillor development programmes include procurement and commercial modules for all participants. Training equips councillors in executive and overview and scrutiny roles to ask the right questions.	Development programmes have resulted in better councillor engagement with procurement and better decisions.	Development equips councillors to play their role in combined authority or group of councils projects or other innovative projects.

Key area: Engaging senior managers
Description	Engaging senior managers refers to the corporate management team valuing and benefiting from procurement and commercial input at all stages of decision-making, including early advice on major projects.
Help
What it is: Key decision-makers value and benefit from procurement and commercial advice including at the early stages of major projects. This is a two-way process requiring action by senior managers on the one hand and by procurement and commercial advisors on the other. Why it is important: Good procurement and commercial advice (wherever possible, provided in-house or shared between councils) can have a decisive impact on the outcome of a project, particularly one involving innovation. It is important that senior managers engage with procurement and commercial issues from the earliest stages of the project.

Minimum	Developing	Mature	Leader	Innovator
High level principle and specific behaviour
Senior management regard procurement and commercial issues as purely operational matters.	The council is exploring the best approach to obtaining procurement and commercial input into decision-making.	Senior managers are engaged with procurement and commercial issues, routinely taking advice at key decision points.	The council is demonstrating better results from early procurement and commercial advice on projects.	Council procurement and commercial advice is valued by leaders of combined authority or group of councils projects or in connection with an innovative project.

Key area: Engaging senior managers

Minimum	Developing	Mature	Leader	Innovator
Influence and impact
Procurement and commercial input is contributing but the contribution is not visible to senior managers.	Contribution of procurement and commercial has been noted on isolated projects.	Contribution of procurement and commercial input is recognised through representation on corporate management team.	Representation on corporate management team is contributing to better strategic planning, coordination and decision-making.	There is representation on combined authority or group of councils, decision-making bodies or governance structure of an innovative project.
Mission and strategy
Obsolete procurement strategy or no procurement strategy.	Procurement strategy being reviewed and refreshed.	The council has approved a procurement strategy aligned to corporate and service strategies.	The council has approved the procurement and commercial mission to harness supplier innovation.	The council is committed to providing procurement and commercial support to the combined authority, or group of councils, approach in order to harness supplier innovation.

Key area: Engaging senior managers

Processes
Ad hoc approach to managing projects.	Structured approach but not explicit about role of commercial and procurement advice.	Structured approach to project management clearly defining roles and responsibilities in relation to procurement and commercial advice.	Demonstrably better outcomes from projects due to early procurement and commercial advice.	Early procurement and commercial advice from the council is provided to combined authority, or group of councils, joint projects.
Training and development
No formal training for senior managers on procurement and commercial issues.	Some senior managers have attended training courses.	Senior manager development programmes include procurement and commercial modules for all participants.	Development programmes have resulted in better engagement with procurement and commercial functions and better decisions.	Development equips senior managers to engage with procurement and commercial and ensure better decisions in combined authority, or group of councils, projects.

Key area: Working with partners
Description	Working with partners refers to a 'one team' approach to the design and implementation of solutions for public services which spans council departments and organisations.
Help
What it is: The council works as a single team to design and implement solutions for public services and commissioners or budget holders, and commercial and procurement advisors work together as part of that team. Why it is important: A team approach is the best use of limited resources and can lead to innovative solutions and better results. The team approach should characterise how council departments work together and how the council works with other councils, health, fire, police, housing, voluntary, community and social enterprise (VCSE) and other partners.

Minimum	Developing	Mature	Leader	Innovator
High level principle and specific behaviour
There are teams but they work in isolation from commercial and procurement advisers.	The council acknowledges the business case for a cross-council approach to design and implementation of solutions and is seeking to encourage this.	Designing and implementing solutions as a single team in high value or high-risk projects.	Designing and implementing solutions is the council's normal way of working (policy).	Designing and implementing solutions as a combined authority or as a group of councils or with health, fire, police, housing, voluntary, community and social enterprises (VCSEs) and other partners.

Culture
Silo working is not questioned.	The benefits of a change in culture are recognised. Pilots are challenging attitudes and behaviours.	Working as a single team is 'the way we do things here'.	Working as a single team is the norm when the council cooperates with external partners.	Team successes, including significant innovations, reinforce the culture.
Governance and processes
Departments generally have their own arrangements and processes.	Lessons are learned from pilot projects for planning and budgeting processes, project management and governance.	The team approach is supported by: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • corporate and service planning and budgeting processes • a structured approach to project management • effective governance arrangements. 	The team approach is supported by: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • joint planning and budgeting processes • a common approach to project management • strong cross-organisation governance structures. 	Peers acknowledge the transformational results being achieved through partnership working (including governance, processes and project management arrangements).
Training and development
Training and development programmes do not cover partnership working.	Training programmes are under development.	Training programmes cover 'soft skills' of partnership working as well as council processes.	Training programmes cover 'soft skills' of partnership working and shared processes.	Other public bodies regard the council's approach as exemplary practice and involve council staff in their own training programmes.

Key area: Engaging strategic suppliers

Description

Engaging strategic suppliers refers to the process of identifying strategic suppliers and engaging with them to improve performance, reduce cost, mitigate risk and harness innovation.

Help

What it is: The council takes a strategic approach to the management of relationships with the most important suppliers (otherwise known as strategic supplier relationship management). This activity should be carried out cross-department and is most effective when done cross-organisation.

Why it is important: Effective management of strategic supplier relationships can deliver a range of benefits including improved outcomes for the public, added social value, reduced cost, reduced risk and innovation.

Behaving commercially

Key area: Creating commercial opportunities
Description	Creating commercial opportunities refers to how an organisation promotes revenue generation and value creation through the way it plans its major third-party acquisitions (works, services and goods), reviews its business options (make or buy), engages with, and influences, markets and potential suppliers, seeks to support and encourage innovation, and promotes the development of new ideas and solutions to service delivery. Commercialisation is a broad subject, and this key area is confined to how procurement teams should contribute to its successful delivery.
Help
What it is: There are many ways in which commercial opportunities can be created through the strategic management of the commercial cycle and the services and assets delivered through the contracts it creates. Commercialisation is a broad and important subject to the sector. This key area is confined to how procurement teams should contribute to helping identify and create commercial opportunities. Why it is important: As grants from central government are reduced, organisations are required to look at other means of reducing funding deficits. Commercial opportunities can be created in many ways, from conventional means such as increasing returns on assets to the way the council engages with its development partners and third-party contractors.

Forward planning
Some forward planning is undertaken but with a focus on process compliance.	Forward planning is undertaken in some areas or for some acquisition types. Opportunities to create new revenue streams is sometimes investigated in some departments and for some expenditure categories.	Forward planning is always undertaken across the organisation for all strategic contracts. Opportunities to create new revenue streams is considered by all departments and for all relevant expenditure categories. The procurement team are encouraged to contribute ideas for revenue generation in the forward planning process.	Forward planning for contracts has developed to form an integral part of the organisation's budget setting and expenditure forecasting process. The procurement team can contribute ideas for revenue generation in the forward planning process.	Forward planning for contracts is undertaken across multiple organisations to maximise leverage and commercial attractiveness to the market.
Options appraisal (make or buy)
Sometimes undertaken, but only seen as an in-house or outsource decision.	Undertaken for high profile or high value projects and exercises. Evaluation criteria sometimes incorporate commercial and social considerations.	A policy exists, setting out how and when options appraisals must be applied and is used by all departments. Clear guidance on how to identify and evaluate 'make or buy' options, including commercial and social considerations, is in place and widely used. The procurement team is asked to give advice on market and supplier research.	Options appraisals include seeking commercial opportunities or collaborative contracting with others in the sector. New models for service delivery are developed. Procurement is viewed as an integral aspect of options appraisals.	Expanded to include alternative service delivery vehicles, includes creation of new trading companies, seeking commercial opportunities or collaborative contracting with other organisations in the wider public sector.

Key area: Managing contracts and relationships

Description

Contracts and relationship management refers to the effective management and control of all contracts from their planned inception until their completion by the appointed contractor(s). It covers the supporting policies, procedures and systems needed to undertake it, together with broader issues from the identification and minimisation of risk, successful and timely delivery of outcomes and performance, effective control of cost and variations and the maintenance of clear communications and operational relationships with contractors.

Help

What it is: Contract and relationship management is the process by which all contracts and variations are managed effectively to control costs, secure the quality and timeliness of agreed outcomes and performance levels and minimise the occurrence of risks.

Why it is important: Poor contractor performance or commercial failure can seriously damage a council's reputation and its ability to deliver effective services and support to local communities.

Key area: Managing strategic risk

Description

Managing strategic risk refers to the impact by an external event, passing of a statute or illegal activity upon business as usual, reputation or financial health of the organisation.

Help

What it is: A series of actions and policies designed to reduce or even eliminate the probability of a perceived risk occurring and minimising the detrimental effects that may occur should it materialise.

Why it is important: The occurrence of any risk, particularly when it could be foreseen, can have a devastating impact on the organisation’s reputation and the lives of the people it serves, the quality of the services that it provides, and even its financial viability.

Achieving community benefits

Key area: Creating social value
Description	Social value refers to wider financial and non-financial impacts of programmes, organisations and interventions, including the wellbeing of individuals and communities, social capital and the environment. From a business perspective it may be summarised as the net social and environmental benefits and value generated by an organisation for society through its corporate and community activities, reported as financial or non-financial performance or both.
Help
What it is: Social value is about improving economic, social and environmental wellbeing from public sector contracts over and above the delivery of the services directly required and at no extra cost.
Why it is important: Experience from procurements let by councils that have fully integrated social value requirements has shown that a minimum of +5 per cent to +20 per cent social value (according to sector) can be obtained on contract value by way of direct community benefits.

Key area: Local small and medium enterprises (SMEs) and micro business engagement

Description	The government definition of SMEs is any business with up to 250 employees and a turnover of up to 50m Euros. Micro businesses are those with 1 to 9 employees. There were around 6 million SMEs in the UK in 2021, which equates to 99.9 per cent of the business population. For the purposes of this document the term ‘SME’ shall refer to both SME and micro-businesses.

What it is: SMEs are non-subsiary, independent firms.

Why it is important: SMEs play a major role in creating jobs and generating income for those on low incomes, they help foster economic growth, social stability, are a source of innovation and contribute to the development of a dynamic private sector.

There is a proactive approach to integrating SME organisations into procurement and commissioning.	SME engagement is embedded into corporate strategy.	SME engagement is a core operational way of doing business, integrated into all directorates and departments and activities with regular reporting against targets.

Key area: Enabling voluntary, community and social enterprise (VCSE) engagement

Description VCSE refers to organisations that include small local community and voluntary groups, registered charities both large and small, foundations, trusts and social enterprises and cooperatives. These are often also referred to as third sector organisations or civil society organisations.

Help

What it is: The VCSE sector is diverse in size, scope, staffing and funding of organisations. It provides a broad range of services to many different client groups. However, VCSE sector organisations share common characteristics in the social, environmental, or cultural objectives they pursue, their independence from government and the reinvestment of surpluses for those objectives.

Why it is important: VCSE organisations can play a critical and integral role in health and social care including as providers of services, advocates and representing the voice of service users, patients and carers.

Facilitating good relationships with VCSEs
The organisation does not see any benefit from engaging with VCSE organisations.	Relationships between small VCSEs and other providers are not facilitated. It is not considered to be an area where intervention is needed or appropriate. As a result of this, there is an absence of consortia and networking in the locality.	There is some acknowledgment for the convening role that commissioners or procurers can have and what the benefit of facilitated relationships between small VCSEs and other providers could bring. Procurers and commissioners have started to make some efforts to bring these parties together. VCSE ‘umbrella’ organisations are used as a go-between where they exist.	There is responsive willingness to facilitate relationships between small VCSEs and certain larger providers. Some of the benefits of this are being realised. As a result of this, small VCSEs have formed some partnerships with larger providers via VCSE umbrella organisations where they exist.	Commissioners or procurers proactively facilitate, and nurture, relationships between small VCSEs and a broad range of providers through local umbrella organisations where they exist. In turn, small VCSEs have created their own networks and consortia with other providers.
Measurement
There is no measurement of VCSE usage or impact, and it is not seen as important.	There is little time given to the strategic evaluation and impact measurement of services. The perspective of small VCSEs and users is not sought.	Commissioners have recognised the value in employing small VCSEs to reach users, where they could seek insightful service feedback, but have yet to engage them in the process.	Commissioners or procurers often ask small VCSEs to aid them in the user feedback process, recognising their expertise in this area.	Commissioners or procurers work closely with small VCSEs to seek extensive user feedback in order to review the effectiveness of their service in meeting local need.

Adding value
Description	Procurement has a key role in adding value in council spend. We need to work proactively to understand emerging issues and learn how to manage them, we need to understand and mitigate against risks. We need to demonstrate the value we add to our colleagues and partners, sharing data and good practice to move from good to great. This goes beyond making monetary savings, implementing category management, contract management, adding social value and ensuring value for money. As well as ensuring that these building blocks are in place, the sector needs to work openly, closely and rapidly with partners including the wider public sector, central government and key suppliers to seek out and realise all opportunities for adding value through the procurement process.

The organisation implements value for money considerations through competitive procurement procedures and implementation.	The organisation is developing value considerations through category management, savings and demand management, risk and fraud management, performance and transparency, partnering and collaboration.	The organisation has clear policies in place to increase value through the procurement process.	The organisation works across councils on adding value initiatives including good practice on emerging issues, risk management, rapid data sharing including price data, talent development in commercial skills and managing contracts to gain benefits.	The organisation embraces developments and initiatives across councils, across the wider public sector, including central government, and with strategic suppliers. These initiatives include good practice on emerging issues, risk management, rapid data sharing including price data, talent development in commercial skills and managing contracts to gain benefits.

Developing talent
Description	Talent management, recruitment and retention which are key building blocks to an excellent procurement function. Developing talent includes professionalisation of council procurement talent, addressing recruitment and retention of procurement talent and developing agile procurement talent that can address commercial challenges and innovation in the procurement role. Developing talent underpins councils' ability to address issues and particularly issues of value.

Enabling innovation

Description	The procurement rules reform will provide more opportunity to innovate in procurement and flexible procedures. Making use of these opportunities is key.

Minimum	Developing	Mature	Leader	Innovator
Ability to capture and harness procurement innovation in organisation is non-existent.	Innovation only considered in a few contracts where technology is involved.	Outcomes based on procurement and market making are the 'standard' way of doing things. Innovative procurement approaches are not just applied to technology but to established services.	Innovation in procurement and contract management is mainstreamed. Procurement techniques such as innovation partnerships and pre-commercial procurements are used regularly.	All contracts reviewed to identify new service delivery and income generation models. Procurement challenges and innovative potential solutions shared across councils and regions. Procurement rules reform opportunities are embraced.

Embedding change
Description	Procurement has a key role within councils and across the wider public sector and needs to sit at the top table to ensure commercial considerations run through the council decision-making.
Minimum	Developing	Mature	Leader	Innovator
Success depends on individuals, not organisational engagement.	New approaches and ideas are applied in isolated procurement processes.	Procurement change is comprehensively applied across multiple projects and departments.	Senior leaders recognise the importance of procurement and contract management and promote it as a way of leading and managing organisational change.	Procurement and contract management are key drivers of organisational change and are embedded at all levels in the organisation. Lessons learned are shared with other organisations at regional and national levels.
