Who are school nurses and what do they do?

School nurses are crucial to child health and wellbeing, ensuring young people reach adulthood ready and resilient both physically and psychologically.

School nurses champion children and young people to reach their full health and wellbeing potential.

Who are school nurses?

• Registered nurses with additional registered specialist training in public health
• Skilled, knowledgeable, experienced and vitally, trusted by families and stakeholders, who, with the required investment, can significantly contribute to a number of cross-governmental priorities
• Bring clinical expertise and knowledge to a wider system to improve population health and reduce health inequalities
• Innovative workforce that embraces digital technology, service redesign, skill mix, and models for integrating services around children, families and schools
• Supported by skilled, mixed teams of health workers and work alongside other members of the wider children’s workforce.

What do school nurses do?

• Promote the health, wellbeing and protection of all children and young people in all settings throughout their school aged years
• Identify the health needs of individuals and communities using evidence-based assessment tools
• Co-produce programmes with children, young people and families. Plan work collaboratively in partnership with the multi-agency team to address local need and national health priorities outlined by the NHS, OHID and UKHSA
• Use research and audit to deliver an evidence-based service with clear outcomes, with evaluation as an integral part of the process.

School nurses put children and young people’s health and wellbeing central to the delivery of services

"School nurses have long played an invaluable role, helping children with both their physical and mental health in a safe and supportive environment. From early intervention services to dealing with serious youth violence, school nurses have a significant, positive effect on young people’s lives which benefit them both within and beyond the school gates. Their pastoral, supportive role is needed now more than ever as our young people recover from the impact of the pandemic and our schools try to build safe environments for pupils to thrive in going forward. School nurses are on the frontline of spotting problems such as abuse and mental health support needs in vulnerable young people, as well championing healthy eating and providing immunisation and health protection services. The need for comprehensive wellbeing support for pupils has never been greater and school nurses are an essential part of this."

Councillor David Fothergill, Chairman of the Local Government Association’s Community Wellbeing Board

Promote healthy lifestyles

• Maintaining a healthy weight (inc. physical activity, healthy eating and advice for worries about eating disorders)
• Preventative education about tobacco, alcohol and substance misuse
• Promoting good oral health
• Screening and support to provide and increase immunisation uptake
• Relationships, sexual health and contraception.

Keep children and young people safe and well

• Safeguarding against knife, gun and gang crime
• Promoting good mental health to enhance resilience (inc. bullying, including physical/on-line, peer pressure)
• Promoting safety and reducing accidental injuries
• Safeguarding vulnerable children and young people
• Looked after children.

Support children and young people who have additional needs

• Long term health conditions e.g. asthma, diabetes, epilepsy and anaphylaxis
• Disability and complex health needs
• Continence.

Help children and young people make transitions

• Starting school
• Moving to secondary school
• Preparing for adulthood
• Changes and life events.
What difference do school nurses make?
School nurses provide a vital and unique link between school, home, and community. Using a public health approach and through offering early identification and intervention, they:

- Support children being school ready
- Reduce health inequalities reaching out to vulnerable and marginalised young people who may otherwise ‘fall through the gaps’ of health provision
- Reduce attendance at accident and emergency departments and hospital admissions
- Reduce childhood obesity
- Reduce dental caries
- Reduce under 18 conception rates
- Reduce the prevalence of chlamydia, human papilloma virus (HPV) and cancers
- Increase uptake in childhood immunisations
- Provide health infection, prevention, and control expertise
- Promote and support positive mental health, thus, school attendance and attainment
- Reduce the burden on community health services, parents, families, schools and specialist services children’s services e.g. child and adolescent mental health services
- Supports vulnerable children, young people, families, and schools as a recognised professional external to the school, offering emotional support to address any risk-taking behaviours and/or support presenting health issues
- Parents, teachers, and students perceive school nurses as a positive, accessible, flexible resource; they are trusted, highly valued, and appreciated. They impact positive behaviour change through holistic health assessment.

The LGA has long called for an increase in the public health grant to enable councils to commission a school nurse for every secondary school, as well as a comprehensive workforce plan to address shortages.

"Our current school nurse is outstanding. She is extremely proactive and has brokered us essential support; in addition to supporting us with child protection and early help cases.”

-- North West England Head Teacher

"Thank you for letting me discuss the problems that I had in Year 7 and how I can change my behaviour.”

Feedback from a young person, who attended a health assessment

"Very informative, makes you re-think everything but doesn’t make you think you are a bad parent.”

Parent feedback from School Nurse led Parenting Group

"Very good, enjoyed talking about feelings and emotions and being able to share experiences with other parents.”

Parent feedback from School Nurse led Understanding your child’s emotions workshop

"The School Nursing service knows which children and young people are Home Educated. They ensure that they can opt into the available support, should they require it. The service makes available additional support for those children with an identified safeguarding need.”

Ofsted Safeguarding Inspection feedback, 2019

"A really good nurse who explained everything and was really good with our son.”

Feedback from a parent who attended a health assessment
References

1. SAPHNA (2021) School Nursing; A service fit for the future. Available from [Internet]: SAPHNA-VISION-FOR-SCHOOL-NURSING.pdf
6. Blake (2019) How can vulnerable young people have improved access to the School Nurses? Community Practitioner, CPHVA. Available from [Internet]: How can vulnerable young people have improved access to the School Nurses? | Community Practitioner