Clinical Commissioners

Background of Commissioning for Better Outcomes

A route map published by LGA and University of Birmingham in 2015

‘...standards designed to support a dynamic process of continuous improvement through self-assessment and peer review, to challenge commissioners and their partners, to strengthen and innovate to achieve improved outcomes for adults using social care, their carers, families and communities.’

Commissioning for Better Outcomes and Integration - drivers for a new framework

- More integrated arrangements between CCGs and LAs
 - Legislative and policy changes – Care Act ; 5 Year Forward View
 - Complexity and differences between NHS and ASC
 - STPs and BCF – direction of travel
 - No common definitions of good integrated commissioning
 - University of Birmingham evaluation
 - Supported by Department of Health in policy context of good commissioning

Overall purpose of the new ICBO Framework

- Achieving and promoting a consensus on good practice in commissioning
 - how better outcomes for individuals can be achieved together
 - development and delivery of a common framework for integrated commissioning by Clinical Commissioning groups and Local Authorities

What does the Framework cover?

- Purpose and Use
 - Principles and Values
 - 4 Domains with standards and measures
 - Annexes: health and local government working together: market shaping and challenges, emerging policy landscape, behaviours and leadership, personalisation
 - Resources

Who is the framework for?

- Commissioners working in NHS and Local Government
 - People managing their personal budgets
 - Leaders across Health and Social care
 - Social care and Health professionals

Underlying principles

- Based on principles and values
 - The '3 Ps'; People, Places, Populations
 - The person at the centre
 - Focus on outcomes
 - Tools for improvement, not guidance
 - Practical and useful
 - Improving outcomes by working together
 - Reflect the 'I' statements

New Domains, Standards, and Measures
